APRIL 16, 2006 (Boca Raton, FL) --- Multi-Media Productions (USA), Inc. announces that Premier Micronutrient Corporation will appear on Health Journal Television, hosted by General Alexander Haig.

Responding to a critical need, Premier Micronutrient Corporation's (PMC)_scientific leaders have developed a groundbreaking micronutrient antioxidant supplement that decreases oxidative damage caused by hazardous environmental exposures while increasing immune function.

PMC's formulations are a unique combination of dietary and endogenous antioxidants present in appropriate forms and ratios to be administered at the proper schedule. Although many people take some sort of dietary supplement, almost 2 million military veterans suffer from six of the most common chronic diseases including diabetes and heart disease; at an annual cost of 20 billion dollars to the US taxpayer. This segment of Health Journal Television explores how an antioxidant supplement mixture developed by PMC helps mitigate the risks of these illnesses and the potential toxicity associated with long-term medications.

Current research includes oxidative damage and immune studies with the U.S. Navy and Marine Corps for micronutrient use in training and in combat, including a study with returning injured Marines at the Naval Medical Research Center on acute acoustical trauma. PMC is assessing radiation protection in collaboration with NASA. The Veterans Administration is evaluating a PMC formulation in diabetic patients.

Executive Vice President of Programming, Adam Dubner added, "When researching the latest developments in nutritional science, Premier Micronutrient Corporation consistently came up as being in touch with the most current advancements in this area. They were a natural to appear on this edition of Health Journal Television."
