

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

WALL STREET REPORTER INTERVIEWS PMC'S CEO, DAVID NEWELL

Nashville, TN, April 25, 2006 — Premier Micronutrient Corporation (PMC) announced today that Chief Executive Officer, David Newell is the subject of an interview and webcast with the Wall Street Reporter.

During the interview, which can be accessed at <http://www.wallstreetreporter.com>, Mr. Newell discussed PMC's role with "one of the biggest customers in the world (the U.S. Government) and how we are developing a program to help protect troops" from environmental stressors that often lead to poor health.

Their partnership with the U.S. Government came with a major milestone, "We are the first supplement company ever to be given Institutional Review Board (IRB) approval by the U.S. Navy to be given to operating forces," Mr. Newell said.

The supplement arena is saturated with players, "It's really been a marketplace that's been fragmented and devoid of consumer confidence and which has been dominated by fringe practitioners that have minimal credible science in the field. We are trying to bring creditably into the arena with our research capabilities and with the fact that we are trying to differentiate in a market place that does not recognize people with different health needs."

The fifteen-minute audio interview covers PMC's new formulation for combat veterans, Veterans Ultimate Complete, "We want to be on the side of the angels with veterans and to positively affect the health outcome and quality of life issues for that population." Mr. Newell expands on his perception of major trends in the supplement industry and what that means for his company, "We are trying to take a higher bar approach on a research base to benefit the supplement industry as a whole."
